

FAQs on working at Dräger

Do you have an induction programme for new employees?

As a new employee, you are welcomed at Dräger with open arms. Your personal induction plan will make you well informed about all important facts and will acquaint you with your new colleagues.

Of course, your managers, colleagues and Human Resources management are right by your side through the first steps in your new work routine with advice, assistance and all the necessary information.

What are the standard working hours at Dräger?

Our full time employees work in general between 37 and 40 hours a week. Although there are elements of flexibility.

What are my holiday entitlements?

Your basic annual holiday entitlement for a full calendar year is 25 days per annum (excl. Bank Holidays).

Do I receive any benefits concerning my pension?

Your work at Dräger protects, supports and saves lives. For this commitment, we would like to give you something back in retirement. We help you to build a financial cushion so that you can also enjoy a high standard of living in retirement with our Dräger Group Personal Pension Plan.

We make a contribution to your retirement account each month. You are able to join our pension scheme after six months of service. For further information about the conditions please contact the HR department.
